ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

H. G. Thomas of Stowe, state fish and game commissioner, has received word of the death of three deer, one killed by a train at Randolph, one found dead in Georgia, and one drowned in Lake Memphremagog, at Newport.

The dry house of Drake Smith & Co., box manufacturers; in Bellows Falls, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon with about 12,000 ftof lumber. It was impossible to save the building and the efforts of the firemen were di rected to saving the other buildings. The loss is about $1,000 with no insurance. They will rebuild very soon.

A cyclone or something of the kind some time this spring swept down through a small ravine between J. N. Betterley's and Edward Dodge's in Dum-merston. Where it first started it clearin the ground, throwing sods some of them two feet square, in all directions. That was as fare as any damage was

Skeleton Found in the River.

John E. Gale of Guilford was notified telephone Monday morning that a skeleton has been found on a and har in the Connecticut river just beow the falls at Turner's Falls which ossibly might have been that of his missing ward, Lester J. Stafford, who disappeared Oct. 15, 1904. Mr. Gale drove to Turner's Falls Wednesdhy and saw what had been found. "The skill was intact although most of the teeth on the upper jaw had fallen out; those on the lower jaw were in place and sound. Parts of the limbs were found, enough so an estimate could be made of he height, about 5 feet 8 inches, Both eet were missing. All the bones were small indicating a person of slender build. Mr. Gale was satisfied that it was not the anatomy of Stafford. There is no way to determine how long the body had lain in the water. A large number of people from different places have been there to see if they could identify a missing friend or relative but no clue has been discovered so far. Further digbones if possible; then, if no one can say to whom they belonged they will be buried at Riverside.

The dummy director is not a creation of high finance. He has existed a century or more, his birthplace being London. The old-fastrion dummy director, however, was a plain and simple factor, compared with his progeny of today. He was usually a nobleman who loaned his name to a corporation in exchange for a gift of a block of its stock. Th resence of a titled name on the list f directors was an asset of consequence a corporation in those days; it gave the stock-investing public the impression of dignity, stability, and conversatism; it helped greatly to sell shares. #### FARM MANURE.

Exhausting Soil Fertility by Continnous Grain Growing. By CHARLES E. THORNE, Ohio exper

As the cereal crops approach maturity there is a partial separation of their chemical constituents, the nitrogen and phosphorus accumulating in the grain until about three-fourths of that held by the entire plant is found there, while the straw, or stover, contains the major portion of the potassium; bence when the grain is sold it carries away from the farm an undue proportion of phosphorus and nitrogen, and there will in time result a deficiency of these elements in the soil as compared with potassium unless the supply of this also is reduced by the selling of hay and straw or of leafy plants, such as tobacco. If mixed farming be practiced, including the growing and fattening of live stock, most of the potasslum will be retained on the farm, but there will still be a heavy loss of phos phorus in that carried away in the bones of animals grown on the farm. In early Ohlo practice wheat wa grown and sold off the farm, while corn and bay were fed to live stock. In recent years, however, less live straw. The result is that there are few soils in Ohio in which the need of phosphorus is not becoming manifest, while some are also beginning to show deficiency in potassium. The nitrogen supply also is generally more or less

A ton of average mixed farm manure as taken from open barnyards may be expected to contain nine pounds of rent. nitrogen, ten of potassium and three or four of phosphorus. Under average conditions Ohio soils would seem to require more phosphorus in proportion to nitrogen and potassium than that contained in manure, and in 1897 an experiment was begun at this station in the re-enforcement of manure with phosphorus, the materials used for this purpose being the finely ground phosphate rock, known as "floats," from which acid phosphate is made, and acid phosphate itself.

From the results it would seem that the nitrogen and potassium of the manure, when that has been re-enforced with phosphorus, have been the same elements carried in sodium nitrate and potassium chloride, and after land has been brought up to an investment.
